

Student engagement assignment: study skills 101

For my third university engagement I have been going to tutoring to help me in my math 111 class. The tutoring I get is on the second floor of Fenton Hall in their library and is open Monday through Friday 10am to 6pm. It is also open on Sundays until 2pm. They are able to help with all different levels of math, not just math 111 because the tutors are actual teachers and GTF's for the universities math courses. I try and get their at least twice a week on the days I have barely any class. Math 111 is the most failed class here at the university and I will absolutely not be a part of failing this course. After dropping it last term because the professor absolutely sucked, I decided to take it again this term and power it out. I find this math 111 class to be a lot more understanding but still very challenging. At first I really did not know where to go for help when I did not understand my math homework, but my GTF for my math 111 class mentioned this tutoring. Whenever I have math homework to do, I find that it takes up quite a bit of my time and is sometimes very frustrating. When I go to tutoring I am always able to get my homework done. Even if I may already understand the material for the homework, I will still go to tutoring just in case I cannot figure something out. I have learned that they tend to get pretty busy during the middle of the day, so I always try to get in as early as possible. I am very glad I was informed about this tutoring service in the beginning of this term. They have helped me a lot on what I am able to understand now.

- shared with student permission, University of Oregon