

“Living with Conflict, Searching for Peace”

A conversation with Dr. Menachem Mor

Why does Israel seem to be a site of persistent social conflict?
How can better relationships be forged between Israeli and Arab neighbors?
What strategies can we envision for achieving a lasting peace in the region?

When: October 5, 4:30-5:30 PM

Where: Bean East Residence Hall, Moore Lounge

The Harold Schnitzer Family Program in Judaic Studies and the UO Faculty Fellows Program are pleased to welcome Dr. Menachem Mor to campus on October 5. Dr. Mor is Dean of the Humanities at the University of Haifa and a specialist in Jewish history and culture. He will provide historical context for understanding the Arab-Israeli conflict and share his reflections on the current social climate in Israel. His presentation will be followed by conversation and discussion on the the roots of the Israeli-Palestinian problem, the characteristics of political and social justice, and the transformation of communities marked by violence into those grounded in peace.
