This course explores our place on the map, focusing on how geospatial technologies have transformed our decisions and our lives.

We explore the use of online mapping, satellite images, crowd sourcing, mobile technologies and how spatial information is embedded in our daily activities. In this course you will: Create an online mapping application, develop a website about food deserts in the US, tell your own GeoStory, and find a spatial solution for an epidemic.