

Continuing the long tradition of recently graduated students passing on their modified uothesis class file, I'm sending my modified version!

The main thing this class file fixed is the alignment in the list of tables and the list of figures at the beginning. Previously the text would often invade the page number column if there were more than one line in the (often shortened) caption in the list. In addition I removed the hanging indent on the descriptions in these lists, but that should be pretty easy to add back in if you want.

I also did some minor work on improving the consistency of how dots were added to subsections etc. Previously there were some cases where there were either missing or added dots at some part in the hierarchy. Another adjustment was to the horizontal position of the chapter names in the Table of contents. The chapter number was overlapping with the chapter title for some of my titles, so I changed the horizontal positioning to fix that. There is also an adjustment I made to the dedication portion, mainly making it raggedright.

That's all I remember for now. Main thing was really the fix to the alignment in the list of figures and list of tables. That was the big issue the graduate school wanted me to fix when I submitted it to them.

I submitted my thesis using this class file with fully justified text, so I have not fully tested this for raggedright text.

Hope this proves useful!

Best,
Ryan
