Overview: The Humanities Undergraduate Research Fellowship (HURF) program is designed to increase research opportunities for UO undergraduate students in fields related to the humanities. Fellows will conduct sixteen weeks of faculty-mentored research over the winter and spring quarters resulting in a written paper that will be publicly presented. Fellows will receive a $2,500 stipend for their efforts and will participate in monthly seminars focusing on the development of research skills, the responsible conduct of research, and career preparation activities and workshops.

The HURF program is a collaboration between the Oregon Humanities Center, the Office of the Vice President for Research and Innovation, the Undergraduate Research Opportunity Program, and the Division of Undergraduate Studies.

Questions about the HURF program may be directed to Karl Reasoner at urop@uoregon.edu.

Benefits:
- Conduct research under the guidance of a UO faculty mentor
- Receive a $2,500 stipend
- Participate in monthly discussions with humanities faculty and other 2015-2016 HURF recipients
- Present your work at the 2016 UO Undergraduate Symposium

Application Details:
- Application materials available at the http://blogs.uoregon.edu/undergraduate-research/?p=2883
- Application deadline is November 1, 2015

Sponsored by: